MONTHLY COMMENTARY

In April, global bond markets stabilised over the month. Despite persistently elevated volatility, yields tended to fall slightly across the board. Combined with a noticeably higher current yield, this led to a return to slightly positive performance in the bond market, following the erratic price setbacks in March. In the first half of the month, the initially promising peace talks between the USA and Iran led to a noticeable recovery. However, as hopes faded, bonds largely gave up their price gains in the run-up to the central bank meetings at the end of the month and moved closer to the yield highs seen in March. The US Federal Reserve left its key interest rate range unchanged (at 3.50-3.75%) and significantly toned down its previous outlook on future easing. On the other side of the Atlantic, the European Central Bank also kept its key interest rate at 2.0%, while signalling that a rate increase in June could be possible once sufficient additional information and updated staff forecasts become available. Risk premiums on spread products (such as corporate bonds) declined over the month due to the slightly improved risk sentiment. Within the portfolio, the increased allocation to corporate bonds was reduced following a positive contribution to value, in line with the improved risk sentiment. Furthermore, we tactically reduced our holding of convertible bonds after they demonstrated the value of convexity in March and during the subsequent recovery on the equity market. The proceeds were reinvested in high-quality covered bonds, as well as in inflation-linked bonds, which offer attractive real yield levels and inflation protection. On the derivatives side, we continue to actively position along the volatility surface via long call and short put options, as well as directionally via futures, with a significant weighting at the short end. Given the global growth risks, we currently believe that the risks of interest-rate increases at the short end of the yield curve are not being priced in evenly. At fund level, we believe that the attractive current yield, combined with the high quality of the bonds, provides a buffer against potential market fluctuations. The comparatively more offensive duration may allow for significant participation in the event of falling interest rates near the potentially reflexive points of the yield curve.

OPPORTUNITIES

- + Participate in global bond market growth.
- + Income can be generated from regular interest payments.
- + Active interest rate, currency and risk management (e.g. from the use of derivatives).
- + Increase in potential returns through the use of investment-grade bonds, contingent convertible bonds ('CoCo bonds') and bonds with no maturity date ('Perpetuals').

RISKS

- Country, credit and issuer liquidity risk. Also potential exchange rate risks. If securities are illiquid (i.e. thinly traded), there is a risk that it may either not be possible to sell the assets at all or only by accepting a significant discount on the sale price. ESG criteria can restrict the selection of target investments in terms of category and number, sometimes considerably.
- Investing in bonds may entail price risks, especially in case of rising interest rates on the capital markets.
- Where used, derivatives can have a greater negative impact on the fund value than would be the case if the assets were acquired directly. The value of the fund may also be negatively impacted to a greater extent by the use of investment-grade bonds. This can affect the fund's risk profile and volatility (tendency for the price to fluctuate).
- The limited use of contingent convertible bonds ('CoCo bonds') and bonds with no maturity date ('Perpetuals') entails specific additional risks. 'CoCo bonds' are typically debt instruments that can be converted into the issuer's equity or redeemed in whole or in part if a predefined trigger event occurs. 'CoCo bonds' increase the complexity of the fund and may present a higher liquidity and market risk. 'Perpetuals' have no fixed maturity and may increase the risk of repayment of the bond.

Please read the Prospectus and particularly the RISK WARNINGS section and the specific annex of the subfund to understand the risks and benefits of this product.

INVESTOR PROFILE

GROWTH-ORIENTED:

The fund is appropriate for growth-oriented investors. Due to the composition of the net sub-fund assets, there is a high degree of risk but also a high degree of profit potential. The risks may consist in particular of currency risk, credit risk and price risk, as well as market interest rate risks.

INVESTMENT HORIZON:

Medium- to long-term:  $\geq 4$  years

RISK INDICATOR

The risk indicator assumes you keep the product for 4 years. The actual risk can vary significantly if you cash in at an early stage and you may get back less. The summary risk indicator is a guide to the level of risk of this product compared to other products. It shows how likely it is that the product will lose money because of movements in the markets or because we are not able to pay you. We have classified this product as 3 out of 7, which is a medium-low risk class. This rates the potential losses from future performance at a medium-low level, and poor market conditions are unlikely to impact our capacity to pay you. Unusual market conditions could arise, for example, due to currency, creditworthiness, price, counterparty, liquidity and interest rate risks, as detailed in the sales prospectus.
